A BIG DAY

OUR $10 Overcoats have made a great hit. When our sales were over Saturday night the window in which these garments were displayed looked as if it was struck by a cyclone.

LONG, SLIM men, with long arms, who want to get an extra long overcoat, with long sleeves, will find our "Slims" the right thing. Short sleeve men find our "Stouts" ditto.

THE amount of Heavy Undergarments that were purchased at our store last Saturday is something wonderful. Customers who were obliged to wait their turn at the counters can vouch for this statement.

LAST SATURDAY'S Sales were the Largest we have had in 2 years. This is the best possible proof that the people appreciate a Store full of Honest Bargains, and that our wearing apparel makes men extremely happy.

Republican Rally.

The only political rally of the present campaign in this town was held in the Town Hall last night, when the Republicans turned out in force, and extended a hearty welcome to Charles F. Loring of Melrose, candidate for councillor from this district, and Curtis Guild, Jr., of Boston. The speakers were escorted by the Andover Brass Band from the depot to the Elm House, where many republicans met and shook hands with them. Then the line of march was resumed to the Town Hall, where an audience of about four hundred gathered to hear the issues of the campaign discussed. Several democrats were noticed in the audience. After a selection by the band, George S. Cole, chairman of the Town Committee, called the meeting, and presented Geo. H. Poor, Esq., as chairman for the evening. He made a few pertinent remarks, and introduced as the first speaker Charles F. Loring, our next councillor from the sixth district.

Mr. Loring spoke for a little over thirty minutes, and was frequently applauded for the many telling points he made. He said it had been one of the most prosperous years the country had ever seen. The store-houses are well filled, and manufactures have reached a more prosperous condition than ever before. He paid his respects in forcible language to Gov. Russell's New York speech, and said that that alone was one of the issues of the campaign. Gov. Russell's position on this occasion was ignominious, but very convenient. The abolition of the council as advocated by Gov. Russell was opposed. Free coinage of silver, the stand of the Republican party on temperance, and other vital questions were well handled by Mr. Loring.

Another selection was then given by the band, and then Chairman Poor introduced Curtis Guild, Jr., as one who would both amuse and instruct his audience, and he did both for about an hour, holding the closest attention of his hearers. He referred to the record of the Democratic party on temperance, and in other matters of reform, and showed wherein the McKinley bill had reduced rather than raised prices, and that shipping and foreign commerce had increased. The republican policy on the questions of free coinage, civil service, ballot reform, immigration, the national copyright, and bankruptcy bills were ably upheld by Mr. Guild. His closing remarks were a very eloquent appeal for the support of the republican party and its candidates.

Chairman Poor closed the rally with a few remarks urging every republican to come to the polls next Tuesday, and to see that every other republican was also there.

Andover Electric Co.

All of our citizens will be interested to know that this newest of Andover's industries, which was not a very promising one for a while, is getting into excellent financial condition through the efforts of its alert and energetic officers. The report of the last annual meeting of the Electric Co. meeting showed a good business and a very satisfactory statement. The debt of the company has been bonded and the bonds are nearly all sold, being considered a good investment. At the annual meeting the following officers were elected: Directors, George W. Foster, George F. Holt, B. F. Smith, S. F. Robinson, J. W. Barnard. Clerk, Peter D. Smith. Auditors, James B. Smith and John H. Flint.

COL. ROWELL.

Republican Candidate for Senator.

Col. William R. Rowell, whom the republicans of the Sixth Essex District present as their candidate for Senator, is an able young man of whom without doubt, if elected, the district will be proud.

Col. Rowell was born at North Troy, Vt., March 18, 1844, and is the son of Hon. A. J. and Lucy A. (Richardson) Rowell, his mother being a native of Methuen. He obtained his education in the Mississquoi Valley Academy and the New Hampshire Institute of Fairfax, Vt. He then taught in Mansonville, P. Q. He received an appointment as a cadet at West Point in 1861, but resigned this commission the next winter to join his father in the army under Gen. Grover. He enlisted in 1863 as a private in the 3rd battery of Vermont light artillery, and served with it gallantly until the close of the war, having risen to the rank of first lieutenant. In 1866 he was appointed deputy collector of customs for the port of No. Troy, and during his term of office studied law graduating at the law school at Albany, being admitted to the New York bar in 1869; in 1780 he was admitted to the Franklin, County, Vt., bar and commenced practice at Springfield. He returned to North Troy in 1872, continuing his law practice there. In 1876 he was elected state attorney for Orleans County, holding office two years. Vermont has no attorney general, and the state attorneys, one from each county, have full power to conduct capital and criminal cases in all the courts. Mr. Rowell conducted the celebrated Hayden murder case, securing a conviction. In 1880, he was again appointed deputy collector of customs at North Troy, and about the same time was appointed aide-de-camp on the staff of Gov. Farnham.

In addition to these duties he conducted a very successful business. He held the office of collector until 1886. On May 20 of that year he married Miss Imogene Gleason of Methuen and took up his residence there, establishing a law business which he still carries on. Twice unanimously nominated for representative from the third Essex District, he was elected both times, running about 100 votes ahead of the rest of the ticket in Methuen. He gained important distinction in the house and held the respect of both parties for his able legislation.

In the house of 1889, he was chairman of the committee on taxation and a member of the committee on probate and insolvency, and the special committee to investigate the affairs of the office of the commissioner of province laws; and in the house of 1890, he was chairman of the committee on finance and expenditures.

To the Editor of the Townsman.

The timely, suggestive communication from Professor Wm. Tucker, which appeared in a recent TOWNSMAN, furnishes matter for serious reflection, at one most important point of the new problem which is before the citizens of Andover for solution.

The possible — nay the probable — "beer garden" as an outgrowth of the street railway, has been talked of in private. We do not remember to have seen it referred to before in the columns of your paper. What supports the beer garden, and makes it profitable to the runners of the road? Sunday travel, which gives it the chief patronage! Reduce that to a minimum at the outset, and you strike the heaviest blow at the future beer garden. "The one influence to be feared and guarded against is the organized liquor influence." Is not the question of Sunday travel now under consideration most intimately connected with the question of prohibition, to the establishment and maintenance of which, the best sentiment of our town has, hitherto, so faithfully and successfully rallied?

It has been suggested that the street railroad may eventually be connected through to Boston for the accommodation of local travel. May not the character of the first three miles, determine the character of the whole road? Which possibility shows the vast importance attached to the stand taken by the town at this critical juncture in making the final negotiations with the company.

Can we better serve our neighbors, as well as ourselves, than by keeping up a high tone of public morality worthy the past good name of Andover?

PROHIBITIONIST.

A Prize Won and Lost, Found after Sixteen Years.

Just sixteen years ago there was a grand tournament of riders at Andover. Valuable prizes in cash were offered to the best riders in the saddle, the question of superiority to be settled upon the points of grace and beauty of the horse, the accoutrements, good appearance, skill and equestrian qualifications of the riders. It was a gala day in Andover, horsemen coming in from all the neighboring towns and cities, and from more distant parts of the state. Among others who entered upon the tournament, was Col. Dick Murfey, then and now the landlord of the City Hotel in Chelsea. He had a magnificent horse, was equipped with the best he could procure, and besides, was a skilled and graceful rider in the saddle. When he left home he told his friends that he was going for a prize, and when the grand parade was over and he had passed the scrutiny of the judges, he was astonished, and it goes without saying that he was pleased in being called up to receive the first prize, a large sum of money, which was formally delivered to him with many compliments upon his appearance, by the late Chief Justice Morton of our supreme judicial court. Dick was the happiest man in Andover, and he called in a few of his friends who had witnessed his triumph, and celebrated the victory by an entertainment suitable to the occasion.

He came home, having the money in an envelope, which he put in a pocket of his coat. The next day the envelope and money were nowhere to be found. He did not believe even an expert pickpocket could get it without his knowledge, and not being able to find the treasure after diligent search, he finally concluded that some one upon his premises must have purloined it, but he did not know whom to suspect and after brooding over it for a long time and sorrowing that a prize he valued so highly, not for its mere intrinsic worth, but because of the flattering manner it was won and presented to him, he gave it up and dismissed it from his mind.

On Thursday, while workmen were employed in pulling down and removing fixtures, etc., from the office of the City Hotel, preparatory to making it a temporary dining room, an old chest was removed from under the counter. Behind it was a yellow, dirt covered, and time-begrimmed envelope. It was handed to Dick who, stood near by. He opened it, and there was the long lost prize money in the identical envelope which he had so carefully placed in his coat pocket. It was a glad surprise, and landlord Murfey was ten times more happy than he was on that day at Andover sixteen years ago, when Chief Justice Morton formally presented it to him, after he had won it against hundreds of gallant competitors. He is happy in recovering the prize, but is at his wits' end to determine how it got behind that old chest that has not been moved for sixteen years. It's a mystery that will never be solved.

Journalism and Literature.

In an article on Journalism and Literature in the November Atlantic, the writer, Professor W. J. Stillman, says:

As the journal of culture leads to scholarship and the sounder and broader general education of the public, its work passes under the classification of science and out of journalism proper; it is a branch and continuation of the university. We in the United States of America are proud of our educational system, and it is not an infrequent boast that we are the best educated people in the world. In fact we are one of the worst. It may be true that in the United States there are more native boys of a given age who can read and write than in any other country, and that we have more colleges and universities than any two other countries combined; but the number of persons who are profoundly versed in any branch of learning, or who may be said to be really educated, is probably less than in most European countries. In such a question it is not the extent of the primary or secondary education that tells, but that of the superior. Nor is there any validity in the excuse that we are a young nation; we have all the advantages that heredity can give, and the concentrated results of all the culture the world has known, and the proof that we fully enjoy the advantages of this epoch and past epochs is that here and there an individual amongst us rises to the highest attainments of the culture of the day. But our education in any given branch out of the practical, the pursuit of the material, is extremely superficial, and we are content that it should be so. It is peculiarly and almost exclusively a newspaper education, and responds to the demands of the day,—calls for information, not for knowledge. And it is almost inevitable that it should remain so, at least for a long time, for the newspaper is the readiest of all appliances for cramming, and cramming is the vice not only of our country but of our race, though eminently of our nation as compared with other nations of our race. America has in fact transformed journalism from what it once was, the periodical expression of the thought of the time, the opportune record of the questions and answers of contemporary life, into an agency for collecting, condensing, and assimilating the trivialities of the entire human existence. In this chase of the day's accidents we still keep the lead, as in the consequent neglect and oversight of what is permanent and therefore vital in its importance to intellectual character. The effect is disastrous, and affects the whole range of our mental activities; we develop hurry into a deliberate system, skimming of surfaces into a science, the pursuit of novelties and sensations into the normal business of our lives; our traveling is a competition to see the most in the least time, our learning the collection of the greatest number of facts concerning the greatest number of things, and our pride the multitude of subjects we know something about rather than the soundness and depth of the knowledge we possess of a few. We desire to be glib; we mistake glitter for luminousness; we force the note in whatever we undertake, for nothing is so repugnant to our standards as the calm of a serene philosophy. The most disastrous consequence of this condition of things is that even those of us who are earnest are driven into materialism in some of its shapes, if we would make an impression on contemporary development, and our lives are little by little deprived of the spiritual leaven that makes their true vitality. We are more proud of this electric-light brilliancy than we are of any of our real virtues, and strain to be sparkling until we but dimly perceive the difference between being funny and witty, more dimly than between being witty and wise. To sum up all that could be said on this score, we are more anxious to seem than to be. Our art, our literature, our politics, and our social organization are infected with the passion of an ostentation often mendacious, always superficial.

Souvenir Spoons of America.

The collection of souvenir spoons has become the greatest fad of such a nature that the American public has ever indulged in. Every city and town of any prominence or containing any romantic episode in its history is now represented by a spoon, and it is safe to say that $500,000 is invested in the manufacture of these souvenirs.

To serve as a guide or handbook, or encyclopedia of these spoons, for the use principally of those who are interested in the fad, is the purpose of a book entitled "Souvenir Spoons of America." One hundred and eighty-nine spoons are described and illustrated, the descriptive portions giving the significance of each design, with a relation of the various events commemorated.

The volume is a curious work, for besides being a complete guide to the fad it is an encyclopedia of interesting events, briefly and pointedly written. The letter press, illustrations and ornamental features are in complete consonance with the artistic nature of the subject treated. The volume is interesting to others besides souvenir spoon collectors.—Cape Ann Advertiser.

What the Tax is for.

The Lowell assessors in conjunction with the collector of taxes have inaugurated an improvement on their methods of making out the bill for the year. Whoever pays a tax on any property, personal or real, receives a tax bill containing on the back thereof a detailed statement of each item of property for which he is assessed with the valuation thereon.

This gives the taxpayer an opportunity of seeing at a glance of what his total tax is composed, and of informing himself without visiting the assessors' office, as to whether every piece of property held by him has been properly assessed. The advantages of this improvement are apparent to all, and are commending themselves to the tax-paying public as indicated by frequent remarks of commendation.

How Rubbers are Made.

Many people suppose that rubber shoes are made by melting the material and running it into moulds. Such is not the case. The manufacture of rubber shoes is not very much different from the manufacture of leather shoes. They are made on lasts just the same, but instead of being sewed they are cemented.

"We get most of the raw material from South America," said a drummer. "It is about the color of molasses and is of a spongy matter. First it goes through a crushing or rolling process and comes out in rough sheets, and looks very much like cow's hide. Then it is taken into a compounding room, where it is mixed with a compound and vulcanized. After that it is cut up into small pieces, according to the parts of the shoes which we wish to get, and is afterwards fitted into lasts by the workmen in the same manner that leather is.

How much pure rubber is contained in the manufactured article? About seventy per cent. The best Para gum costs ninety-five cents a pound, so you see rubber boots and shoes cannot be made for nothing. In the smallest rubber shoe there are about four ounces of pure rubber, and from that to probably four pounds in a pair of rubber boots. Old rubbers are ground up, lining and all, into what we call rag carpet and is used for insoles. The work is nearly all done by hand, and in the factories are employed young children, men and women. A boot maker gets twenty cents a pair for making them, and a good man can turn out from ten to twelve pairs a day.

There are between fifteen and twenty rubber boot factories in the country, with a total capacity of 160,000 pairs of boots and shoes a day. There are four factories having a capacity of 40,000 pairs. It is a mystery where they all go to.—Exchange.

A Chinaman's Proposition to the American Board.

Wong Chin Foo, New York's smartest Chinaman, sends this letter to the Sun:

"In last Friday's Sun I saw that the Board of Foreign Missions is raising $1,000,000 to convert the heathens of China, India, and other unfortunate and neglected children of God. I am one of those benighted heathens that they wish to convert, but heathen as I am, I feel as if I have Christian charity enough left to plead for a certain portion of New York city. Let me suggest to the board that they leave half of China's share for the Fourth Ward in New York and the other half to that part of Harlem bounded by Tenth Avenue, First Avenue and Ninetieth and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Streets. This is a territory almost as large as the county of Pou Loy, in which is situated Tong Cho China, where the bulk of the money is to be sent—a county where there was not a drunkard or a murderer for 500 years.

Here is the report of a Chinese who has just come in from Harlem with a broken head, split nose and a torn and tattered coat, because he dared to walk upon their streets. If the board is unable to find a missionary who is brave enough to live in Harlem, let it put up the cash right here; and I will risk my life to change Harlem's savagery to humanity.

When I think that a Chinaman is not good enough to live on the same land for only a short time with a Christian—nay, he even forfeits the privilege of becoming a citizen because his skin his neither white nor black and his civilization is peculiar—I can't understand why the board is willing to pay an enormous price to try to get these yellow-skinned men by the million to go to heaven."—Boston Journal.

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Politics still claim the greater attention in Andover, and will grow more absorbing between now and next Tuesday. All towns seem to have a large registration and Andover is not behind the others. Party lines will probably be drawn closely on most of the candidates which means a probable Republican plurality in Andover of 150 to 200 on an average vote. Everything indicates a full party vote for Mr. Smith for representative, which materialized, assures his election. The slight labor disaffection is pretty sure to blow away before Tuesday, as it certainly ought to. Mr. Smith's qualities as a man, generous and benevolent, his personal knowledge of what all kinds of labor mean to the laboring man and his personal popularity among those who are acquainted with him, should make him an acceptable candidate to every member of his party. On the Democratic side Mr. Stark is sure to bring out his full party strength, but the majority is still with the other side, which means a few more year's growth before the Democrats elect an Andover representative.

Andover will have one other candidate in the field on Tuesday who should not be forgotten. It is E. Kendall Jenkins, candidate for county treasurer. Mr. Jenkins has always been a favorite at the Andover polls and we predict a large vote for him at this time. This is another office which ought to be apart from political schemes, and the record of 75 years with but three treasurers before Mr. Jenkins took the office, would indicate that faithful service has always been appreciated in Essex County. There should be no thought of breaking such an excellent record of long service until at least an even century has marked the administration of four treasurers.

Col. Rowell's popularity is growing daily and although the district is undoubtedly Democratic, his friends expect that he will pull through if the voters will come out. A brief sketch of Mr. Rowell's life will be found on page 2, and the sketch is one more bit of endorsement as to his fitness for the office to which he is nominated.

The rally of last night was fairly well attended and the speeches were well received. It gave to the Republicans an opportunity to see Mr. Loring, their candidate for the governor's council, and he made an excellent impression. He will get a good vote in Andover.

Vote, vote, vote! Not three times, but with a thrice emphasis we wish to say, vote! Vote as your best judgment dictates, considering men and measures carefully and honestly, but however you may decide and whoever you may support, don't decide in secret, and don't support—at home—or afterward. Don't be a stay-at-home next Tuesday, but exercise your first and greatest privilege of citizenship, by voting.

The decision of the Supreme court, favorable to Prof Smyth, in that it decides that he cannot be removed by the Visitors alone, is an announcement that will be a relief to the religious world. The decision probably means an ending of the famous controversy and Andover will rejoice that it is ended, and rejoice that Prof. Smyth is virtually sustained. No matter what could be said by outsiders in connection with the matter, that in its opposition to Prof. Smyth reached at times even a bitter malignity hardly thought possible to be in such circles, Andover citizens, who knew the man thus maligned and misrepresented, stood loyal to him. Each year as the years strung out in the long trial, they grew to love and honor more and more the one who had to stand the brunt of the battle. The decree that the student world has passed upon the stand of Andover professors for advanced Christian thought, is no less favorable to the present seminary faculty than is this later legal decree. The largest seminary for twelve years is an even greater triumph for Prof. Smyth and his associates than is the court's decision. That there is a great future before Andover Seminary, seems to be an assured fact.

We call attention to the announcement, in another column, of the course of lectures soon to be given under the auspices of Abbot Academy by Mrs. Annie Sawyer Downs, in Abbot Hall. The programme is attractive in the character and variety of its topics and, especially, in that they will be treated by one who has large personal acquaintance and warm sympathy with her themes.

ANDOVER CASE.

Supreme Court decides that the Board of Visitors cannot remove Prof. Smyth.

A decision has been rendered by the full bench of the Supreme Court on the famous Andover Case, which is in favor of Prof Smyth. The decision, however, is wholly on technical grounds and not on the merits of the case as urged on the board of visitors. It is decided on the ground that the board of trustees should have been joined as a party to the proceedings with the visitors. As the trustees as a body are supporters of Prof. Smith, the decision is considered a virtual victory for him.

Chief Justice Field alone dissents in a long opinion from the rest of the court and holds that it was immaterial whether the trustees were allowed to appear or not. The majority opinion, by Judge Knowlton, rehearses the facts in the controversy and says that the trustees asked leave to be heard as a party and the board of visitors rejected their application. Again in court the trustees asked to be heard and claimed that the decree of the visitors should be set aside.

The court then considered the nature and function of the board of visitors and their relation to the managing board, namely the trustees, and lays down the doctrine that in the history of constitutions, like the theological department of Phillips Academy, the right of the managing board to be heard before the visitors in every proceeding affecting the corporation seems to have been always assumed. It is a mistake, says the court, to treat a proceeding before the visitors, to remove five of the professors of an institution like the Theological Seminary at Andover as a suit against the professors alone. If they are wrongly there, the trustees should have removed them.

Can it be said that the officers of the corporation who have been charged with its management in the past, and who will be held responsible for its condition in the future, are not interested in a matter so vitally affecting?

The opinion concludes as follows: "The mistake of the visitors seems to have been in failing to appreciate that their functions in the hearing were merely visitatorial, and that they could not as an administrative body represent the interests and present the cause of the corporation whose conduct was on trial before them. For these reasons we are of the opinion that the action of the visitors was not in accordance with the statutes which they were trying to maintain, and that their decree must be set aside."

Prof. Smyth was congratulated on every side over the joyful news of the victory, several telegrams coming from out of town, among the first one from his counsel in the case, Charles Theodore Russell. The "Theologues" manifested great interest and gratification over the result, and after tea Wednesday evening, they marched in a body to Prof. Smyth's house and after cheering him, escorted him and his wife to Bartlet Chapel where the regular weekly prayer meeting was about to take place.

Mr. Editor: It seems to me that there is still a word that ought to be said in regard to the position of an aspirant for the nomination at the Republican caucus. B.R. says that "a large employer of labor, holding the ballot-box, scrutinized each voter as he passed," implying that men employed by the company in which P.D.S. is a partner would be influenced thereby. I am a workman in their employ, and for others and myself throw back the implication with contempt. Is it possible that B.R. judges others by himself?

"O wad some power the giftie gie us,
To see ourselves as others see us."

Andover House Association.

An adjourned meeting of the Andover House Association was held in Plymouth Hall, Boston, Monday afternoon, Prof. W. J. Tucker presiding. The secretary, R. A. Wood gave a report of the business of the last meeting, and Prof. Tucker reported for the committee on organization In this report were articles of constitution and by-laws, which were taken up separately and afterwards adopted as a whole.

It is provided that the annual membership fee shall be $3, that the work shall be religious in aim, but may be furthered by any proper means, according to the discretion of the Association: that the management shall be a council of twelve members, a head of the house and secretary chosen by the Association. The Professor of Pastoral Theology at the Andover Seminary is to be a member of this council, ex-officio. Prof. Tucker holds that position now. Men or women not resident may be enrolled as associate members, and aid in the work. The annual meeting will be held in May or June, at discretion, and the chairman of the council will be chairman of the Association.

The following partial council was presented by the committee, and elected:

For three years.—Revs. Nehemiah Boynton, P. S. Moxom, W. E. Wolcott.

For two years.—Revs. C. A. Dickinson, J. H. Ross, and John Tunis.

For one year.—Revs. H. A. Bridgman and W. B. Roberts.

The remaining four are to be chosen from the laity by the council.

Robert A. Wood will be the head of the house, and E. H. Chandler, secretary.

The Schools of England.

The large audience which went to Phillips Academy Hall, last Friday night, was amply repaid for so doing, for Mr. Fox of the Hopkins Grammar School of New Haven gave an exceeding interesting lecture on "The Great Schools of England." The excellent views with which the lecture was illustrated, also added very much to its enjoyment. One could not help gaining some pleasant information from the lecture, and the faculty is to be commended for providing so pleasing an entertainment. Mr. Fox said the schools of England bore little or no resemblance to those of our country, but were upon foundations royal or otherwise. He mentioned as the foremost schools Eton, Winchester, St. Paul's, Shrewsbury, Rugby, and Westminster. The head masters being all churchmen of prominence, accounts for the moral and religious influences which are so prominent in English schools. Shrewsbury, Harrow, and Clifton owe their origin like many schools in this country, to private beneficence.

The English boy without doubt accomplishes more within the same time than the American boy, and the time when he leaves school must not be later than his nineteenth year. Nevertheless Harvard and Yale require more formal work than Oxford. In speaking of the institutions as being very democratic, and of the plain fare, Mr. Fox said he hoped the departure of the old commons would not remove the plain living and high thinking at Andover.

To a Foreign Field.

The departure of Rev. Edward P. Holton for the Foreign Mission field in India, last week, was perhaps more unique than any that has ever taken place.

Mr. Holton was a member of last year's Advance Class in the Seminary, and therefore goes out as one of the Andover boys. He was appointed to the Madura Mission in Southern India two years ago, when a member of the Senior class at Yale Divinity School, but took a fourth year at Andover to better fit himself for work among the Brahmins.

Last week he was invited to address the Society of Inquiry on his prospective work, which he did at their regular meeting Thursday evening. For a man who has never had any experience in the foreign work, Mr. Holton showed a remarkable knowledge of the field; its requirements, difficulties, and peculiarities; and of the people. His devotion and consecration to the work were very apparent from the address.

Following the address Prof. Tucker spoke of the courage and heroism displayed in entering the missionary field as it is to-day, "a known world," and its imperative demand, closing with a hearty "God speed." Mr. Fairbank of the Senior Class, who was born in the North India Mission field and whose parents are now laboring there, was thereby enabled not only to give Mr. Holton a "God speed," but also to welcome him to the work.

Mr. Holton sailed from East Boston, Saturday afternoon, on the Cephalonia of the Cunard line. A number of the Seminary students were down to bid him "good bye," and after having inspected the vessel and shaken hands for the last time, they gathered at the end of the pier where as the ship was backing out they dispelled the sadness of parting by repeated Amherst College and Andover "cheers."

After the meeting one of the prominent citizens quoted the following lines from Shakespeare which were thought quite applicable to the occasion:

"But man, proud man!
Drest in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
His glassy essence, like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before heaven,
As make the angels weep."

Past Grand Master Barnes Addresses local A.O.U.W.

Lincoln Lodge A.O.U.W. is as usual wide awake and is continually doing something to increase its membership. Not long ago they conceived of the idea of getting P.S.M.W. W. H. Barnes of California to come here and of giving a free entertainment though the expense was quite large. Mr. Barnes, being in such a great demand, had only one open date and this was immediately taken. So last Friday night saw the Town Hall well filled with members and friends of the order, and it was a unanimous feeling that they had spent a pleasant and profitable evening. Master Workman Campbell presided and made a few opening remarks, introducing Mr. Barnes, who spoke for about an hour and a half, but the audience had not tired at all of listening to him. His address was an eloquent, interesting and practical review of the objects of the order and he had a pleasant way of interspersing his remarks with humorous stories. Fraternal societies, their history, and other details seemed as familiar to him as a, b, c. He was frequently interrupted with loud applause.

But not only is he a good orator and humorist; he is also a vocalist and musician, his songs, especially the one on the watermelon, bringing down the house. He played his own accompaniment. Mrs. W. H. Sylvester of Lawrence sang very acceptably, and Sadie Buckley of the same place pleased her audience as usual with her excellent recitations. At the close Mr. Barnes met and shook hands with many of the local and visiting workmen, Deputy Kittredge and others from Lawrence being present. It was a very successful meeting and should be a benefit to the lodge.

Buyers are highly elated and having a good time generally over the remarkable quality, exceedingly nobby styles, and low prices of the overcoats shown by W. H. Gile & Co. of Lawrence. They are endeavoring at all times to bring forward the latest novelties, and intending buyers need look no further for honest values and latest styles at popular low prices.

Andover Liquor Case.

In the Superior Criminal Court, Monday afternoon, before Judge Hammond, the case of the Commonwealth vs. Thomas Tague of Lowell, indicted for the illegal keeping of liquor with intent to sell the same, unlawfully, came up for trial. Assistant District Attorney White of Salem represented the prosecution; W. F. Courtney, of Lowell, the defendant.

Chief of Police Cheever testified that in consequence of circumstances which came to his knowledge, he seized certain bottles of what purported to be "birch beer" at the picnic of the Lowell policemen, at Haggett's Pond, on the afternoon of June 25. The bottles contained lager beer. Chief of Police Howard of Lowell substantiated Mr. Cheever's testimony, and said that Tague solemly promised not to have any intoxicating liquor on the grounds. Two well-known citizens of Andover testified as to the purchase of two glasses of lager at the picnic, but could not identify Tague as the man who sold it.

The defendant testified that he took the contract to cater for the assembly, and paid $60 for the privilege. Denied selling or knowing that any lager beer was being sold there. Thomas Boyle, a Lowell liquor dealer, testified similarly.

The bar tender testified that he was asked for lager by several parties, but knew of nothing except light drinks being sold.

Patrick Kelley and Charles McFarlane, two Lowellites, said they each had two cases of lager on the premises, but they were for private use.

Cornelius Howard, John Custy, Richard Donaldson, policemen of Lowell, testified as to being present, and did not see or know of any liquor being sold.

The case was given to the jury at 11 40 A.M., and returned a verdict of not guilty at the beginning of the afternoon session.

BALLARDVALE.

The first in this year's course of Bradlee Lectures will be next Wednesday evening the Imperial Quartette of Boston being the attraction. They were one of the best of last year's hits. Their specialties are with the banjo, mandolin, and other instruments.

The registrars made fourteen voters Monday night, and ten one evening before in this precinct

Rev. W. F. Stewart gave the first lecture of the series last Sunday night. Next Sunday evening his subject will be "The Modern Dance."

A little more has been learned about that club in the old schoolhouse. Dr. Shattuck is president as stated last week, W. F. Ward vice-president, D. Winton secretary, J. W. Murray treasurer, and N. E. Mears, J. F. Holden, and W. S. Clemons, trustees. The name is not so bloodcurdling as first thought, as they will be known as the "Harmony Association."

Robert E. Clemons has gone to work for the Standard Thermometer Co. at Peabody.

The whist club were entertained by Miss Ada Mears Thursday evening of last week, and last evening they met at Miss Mellie Kniffen's.

Mrs. P. D. Morgan arrived in town Wednesday from San Jose, Cal.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Billington were in Saugus visiting friends last Saturday and Sunday.

Lewis Clark has gone on a fortnight's gunning trip down on Cape Cod.

Waldo F. Penney was in town Sunday, reviving old acquaintanceships.

C. U. Tuck came home Saturday night from Attleborough. He has charge of a gang of track-layers on the Interstate Electric Road, for which M. E. Clemons has the contract.

The Y.L.P.U., at their meeting Monday night, voted to have their annual minstrel show early in December. Secure tickets now, and avoid the crowd at the door.

It was stated in this column last week that Charles Wombwell was heir to one fifth of the estate left by his father, Under the English law, as the oldest son, he is entitled to the entire landed estate. Mr. Wombwell starts to-morrow for England.

The Cosmopolitan Society had an unusually good entertainment in their hall last Saturday evening. The following contributed to the programme: Messrs. Frosch and Carl Hoffman in a duet, "The Stolen Goose," Mr. Frosch representing in costume the farmer, and Mr. Hoffman the lawyer. Miss Annie Tschauder acted as accompanist. A quartette representing an orchestra, consisting of Messrs. Frosch, C. Hoffman, Klisserath Noessel, and Fisher, created much amusement. Henry Riebe gave a comical song, and William Riebe rendered a Xylophone solo. Fred Most contributed a bass viol selection, and the Misses Riebe furnished some very acceptable vocal and instrumental music. Miss Shipp also read a selection. The hall was crowded to its greatest capacity.

At the Union church, last Sunday morning, the usual session was dispensed with, and Mrs. Bary, wife of the pastor, gave a talk on foreign missionary work in general, and particurly on the work in Burmah, where Mrs. Bary lived with her father, who was an active missionary. She gave an interesting account of the work with its hardships and bitter experiences, and the natives and their customs were described. The needs and aims of the foreign missionary cause were so well portrayed that fifty-seven dollars were put into the contribution for foreign missions at the close of her remarks. This is probably the best single contribution for the purpose ever taken at this church.

Mr. Joseph H. Dawson and Miss Lizzie Moore, both of this place, were united in the bonds of wedlock, last Monday evening, at the home of the bride's parents on Andover Street, Rev. E. B. Bary officiating, Miss Emma Platt was bridesmaid and Mr. Frederick Moore, brother of the bride, acted as groomsman. Following the ceremony a short reception was held The happy couple left town Tuesday morning for a bridal trip to Worcester and Providence, and on their return home will reside in Lawrence. The wedding was strictly private, there being none but the family present. A few of the many presents are as follows: From Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Moore, the bride's parents, set of silver knives and forks, set of silver teaspoons, and a silver cake basket; Mr. Frederick Moore, silver pickle jar; Miss Laura Moore, silver butter dish; Miss Emma Platt, daylight parlor lamp.

Miss Carrie E. Newcomb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Newcomb, was married, at five o'clock Wednesday afternoon, at the home of her parents on Andover Street, to Eugene B. Sleeper, of Charlestown, Mass. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. F. Stewart, in the presence of about fifty relatives and friends. Mr. Sleeper's father and mother came on from Pennsylvania, and relatives were present from Newton, Boston and elsewhere. The bride wore a dress of white corded silk, with the regulation train. After the ceremony a reception was held and a wedding supper served. The happy couple left for Charlestown, where they will make their home at No. 11 Union Street. Mr. Sleeper has been an instructor in the states prison for several years, and has many friends, as also has his bride; and each of them must have contributed something as a memento, as the presents were many and pretty, among them being $105 in gold, silver-ware, bric-a-brac, etc.

SAMUEL J. TILDEN'S WILL.

EMPIRE STATE COURT OF APPEALS SETS IT ASIDE.

Gotham Gets $2,000,000 Through the Generosity of Mrs. Laura B. Hazard' a Neice of the Dead Statesman.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—The contest over the will of Samuel J. Tilden was ended by a decision of the second division of the court of appeals of this state, which sets aside as invalid the clause providing for the establishment of a library and free reading room in this city. Were it not that previous to the decree of the court, one of the heirs had agreed to a compromise with the trustees of the Tilden trust, the city would lose entirely the benefits which the statesman-philanthropist desired should accrue to it from his estate. As it is, however, the sum of $2,000,000 is assured for the carrying out Mr. Tilden's wishes notwithstanding the adverse decree of the court of appeals.

Except for the contest the city would have received, for the purposes specified, at least $6,000,000. There is no possibility now for further litigation unless the counsel for the executors of the will before the court, which has just handed down its decision. It is not thought probable that this course will be taken, though no definite announcement has yet been made. The fact that at least $2,000,000 will be available for the founding of a free city library, The Tribune says today, is a surprise to all except the parties to the compromise. No hint of it had been given out, and it was not even known to the contesting heirs.

The amount will come from the shares of the residuary estate that would have gone to Mrs. Laura B. Hazard, the wife of William B. Hazard of this city. Mrs Hazard was the daughter of Mrs. Mary B. Pelton, a sister of Governor Tilden. She would have been entitled to one-half of the estate in litigation, but she was not one of the contesting heirs, though a decision revoking the Tilden trust clause would, of course, have benefitted her. By an agreement with the executors of the will, however, two thirds of her share of the estate is to go to the library fund of the litigation. The suit now ended was instituted by the two sons of Henry A. Tilden, a brother of Samuel J. Tilden. The will had discriminated against these nephews in favor of their four sisters, each of whom received twice the amount that was left to their brothers.

These nephews and nieces will be the beneficiaries of the decision and will receive probably $600,000 each. They are George H. Tilden, Samuel J. Tilden, Jr., Mrs. Caroline B. Whittlesey, Mrs. Henrietta A. Swan of New Lebanon, Susan G. Tilden, the youngest daughter, who was recently married to a Mr. Sabin, and Mrs. Willis S. Payne.

The decision of the court of appeals ends one of the most interesting will cases on record. That the will of so eminent a lawyer should be open to contest was in itself a surprise, and the announcement of the suit was received with astonishment. The case has and has been followed by the people of New York with the utmost interest, because on the decision hung the possibility of carrying out a broad scheme of philanthrophy, from which this city would have received great benefits.

The lawyers on both sides have evinced the greatest confidence in the strength of their respective positions, and a decision has been reached only after a long and bitter struggle. James C. Carter, the leading member of the New York bar, and ex-surrogate Daniel G. Rollins were the counsel for the executors of the will.

Mrs. Pelton's interest is one-half of the estate, and she will receive about $1,000,000, leaving $2,000,000 for the library. Though not carrying out Mr. Tilden's full purpose, it will accomplish something toward it. The other heirs from time to time expressed themselves as anxious to see the library established and have professed at times a readiness to compromise, but terms that the trustees would accept could not be reached.

MEXICO HAS A FAMINE.

The Duty on Corn is Likely to Be Removed as a Consequence.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 28.—A special from the City of Mexico says there is a well founded rumor on the streets that the duty on corn will at once be removed by the Mexican government, owing to the shortness of crops and the famine prevailing in several districts of the Republic. The reports from the flooded districts of Chiapas are heartrending. It is stated that hundreds of people are on the verge of starvation. The state of Guyanajunta, by a special decree of Governor Gonzales, has prohibited the export of corn from the state, and other governors will soon follow his example.

Fresh Trouble in Samoa.

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—The Frankfort Zeitung says: The people of Samoa are enraged at the dictatorial attitude of Vice Consul Blacklock and the German agent in sentencing the Manoa rioters to six months' imprisonment for attacking natives who supported Malietoa. A fresh outbreak is feared, Mataafa and his adherents refusing to submit to Malietoa.

Novel Attempt at Suicide.

FOSTORIA, O., Oct. 27.—Ralph Cunningham, son of a prominent business man, tried to kill himself last night by crawling into the red hot furnace of the spoke factory of which his father is part owner. The engineer pulled him out, but not until his body and head were almost roasted. He will die. Poor health was the cause of the act.

Drink, Despondency and Death.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—James G. Armstrong, aged 48 years old, at one time a prosperous merchant of this city, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. He was formerly a partner of the lithographing firm of Armstrong, Koriff & Co., but lost his partner and began drinking heavily. Despondency is thought to have caused his act.

They Used Morphine.

PARIS, Oct. 26.—It has just transpired that the late General Boulanger was terribly addicted to the morphine habit. The most dramatic incidents of his life were passed while under the influence of morphine injections. The general's mistress, Mme. Bonnemain, was also a victim of the drug.

Davitt's Decision.

DUBLIN, Oct. 27.—Michael Davitt has finally declined to contest the seat for North Kilkenny, as he believes he will be more useful to the party outside of parliament till the general election occurs.

DIRECT BEATS HAL POINTER.

Beats the World's Record for Harness Horses on a Kite-shaped Track.

COLUMBIA, Tenn., Oct. 27.—The great match race between Direct and Hal Pointer attracted an immense crowd to Columbia. The race was for harness horses for a purse of $3000 and an additional $1000 if the world's record was broken. Direct won in three straight heats. Geers urged Pointer to his utmost and once the horse went under the wire off his feet.

The heats were almost identical. The two would get off together at a terrific pace to the stretch. There Geers would brace himself for the final effort and in the stretch would tap the leader, ever coming to Direct's throatlatch. Then Starr would let the whip fall, and with a mighty burst the Californian would go under the wire a winner. The time—2:09, 2:08, 2:08¾—was phenomenal for a new track, though it is kite-shaped and down hill all the way.

THE SEARLES WILL CASE.

Judge Harmon Decides in Favor of Mr. Searles—Notice of Appeal.

SALEM, Oct. 26.—The Hopkins-Searles will contest came to a very sudden, and to the unitiated spectators abrupt, ending Saturday. Both sides rested at 11:30. Judge Endicott arose and said: May it please your honor, both sides having rested their case, it only remains for me to say that we submit our case for your decision in accordance with the customary procedure in such cases.

Colonel Lincoln assented, and Judge Harmon then said that but one course remained for him upon this very partial hearing of the case. The plaintiffs having resting upon the contestants, there was but one issue (that of undue influence, including the charges of fraud) here. Upon the evidence as submitted he should decide that issue was not maintained, and I therefore shall set up this will. An appeal is to be taken.

A MANIAC'S DEED.

Throws His Father from a Roof, Impaling Him on a Picket Fence.

ROCKLAND, Me., Oct. 27. — Horace S. Hobbs, the widely-known labor and People's party man of this city, lies in a dangerous condition resulting from a terrible accident. Mr. Hobbs and son Lindley are slaters. They were at work on a housetop at Vinal Haven, when suddenly Lindley was seized with a fit of insanity, and threw his father from the roof.

The distance was about twenty feet, and the unfortunate man fell with great force upon a picket fence which surrounds the house. He was impaled upon the pickets, being pulled off a few minutes later in an unconscious condition.

In the meantime Lindley was placed under confinement and brought here a raving maniac. Later he was taken to the insane asylum at Augusta. Mr. Hobbs will live, but received fearful injuries.

TO LEAVE OR NOT TO LEAVE?

The Pope Not Disposed to Jump from the Frying Pan Into the Fire.

ROME, Oct. 29.—It is reported that the pope will take decisive action before Sunday on the question of leaving Rome and the alternative question of making a modus vivendi with Italy. At present, indications point to the latter course, the pope's dislike for Italy having received a strong counter-irritant in the action taken by France against Monsignieur Gouthe-Souland, the archbishop of Aix. Since the proposed prosecution of the archbishop was officially announced, the pope has become tolerant of King Humbert's government, and it is even intimated that letters of a conciliatory character have passed between Signor Rudini and the papal secretary of state.

SAFE FOR SEVEN YEARS.

An "Insane" Fiend with a Record for Criminally Assaulting Children.

BUFFALO, Oct. 28.—For a period of years Louis Koester has been the terror of the country around Hamburg for his criminal assaults upon little children. Koester was brought before Judge Seaver for assaulting a 3-year-old girl, and was sentenced to seven years in the Erie county penitentiary at hard labor. Then ensued a remarkable scene. Koester grew livid with rage and addressed a volley of abuse to the presiding judge, and was about to attack the sheriff when a deputy grabbed him by the neck and nearly choked him to death. Koester is nearly 23 years of age, and has been maintained for several years by an indulgent law in an insane asylum.

HOW IS THIS?

Russians are Exporting Rye While Millions are Starving to Death.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 26.—A peculiar feature of the famine now raging is the large exportation of grain to foreign ports, while millions are starving.

It appears over 3,000,000 more pounds of rye have been exported this year than in 1890, notwithstanding the prohibition, which gave a vast stimulus to export a few weeks before it took effect. The number of persons in need of relief is conservatively estimated at 13,000,000. The diseases already prevailing in the famine stricken provinces are creating almost as much alarm as the famine itself.

Guilty of Manslaughter.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Oct. 29.—Harrison A. Tracy of Lynn, Mass., in the superior court yesterday, was found guilty of manslaughter, in causing the death of John Burns, in a boxing match. The jury recommended him to mercy.

As Expected.

OMAHA, Oct. 24.—The verdict of the coroner's jury in the case of the negro Smith, taken from jail and hanged by a mob was rendered yesterday, and is that Smith was "frightened to death by unknown persons."

Life Destroyed by Floods.

CITY OF MEXICO, Oct. 24.—The floods in the state of Tabasco are becoming more disastrous. Thousands of cattle have been drowned, crops have been almost entirely destroyed and many lives have been lost.

Launching of the New Cruiser Detroit.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 29.—The steel cruiser Detroit, the largest vessel ever constructed in a Baltimore shipyard, was launched from the Columbian iron works at 3:40 o'clock yesterday afternoon. She slid into the water gracefully and without a hitch.

Tired of Life.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Oct. 26.—Ex-United States Consul Murray committed suicide here by shooting himself in the head. Mr. Murray was a native of New York.

Portland's New Postmaster.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—John C. Small has been appointed postmaster at Portland, Me.

THE OBSERVATORY.

Little Ruth Cleveland. All Hallowe'en. "Dancing in the Barn." Sir Edwin Arnold to come to Boston.

Little Ruth Cleveland is now the idol of the nation; she has not only paragraphs of adoration but columns! Baby McKee's nose is out of joint, "way to the ladies!'

Those who walk or drive after chestnuts will notice how particularly fine are the barberries this season. On admiring a beautiful hedge of deep red berries in Brookline, I was told that the gentleman whose grounds it enclosed sent an order to England for the finest and rarest hedge which they possessed in that country; they returned barberry bushes, which are certainly most beautiful, but perhaps not exactly what he expected to receive.

It is to be hoped that all the young men and maidens of this good town will try their fate on that auspicious night, the 31st of October. Hallowe'en means a great deal to the Scotch lassie, whose heart's dearest wish is to find the ring in their piece of cake. The night's fun comprises all sorts of queer experiments: hunting Hallowe'en apples, burning Hallowe'en nuts, and visiting a darkened chamber, formerly haunted of course. The cutting of the cake is the most exciting event. In this wonderful loaf before it is baked is placed at proper intervals a ring, a thimble, a penny, a key, and a button. All these may be very simple or as elaborate as you please, sometimes all of gold, the button being a gold collar button, and the penny a gold dollar. The old rhyme says:

The ring for marriage within a year,
The penny for wealth, my dear;
The thimble for old maid or bachelor born,
The button for sweethearts all forlorn;
The key for a journey to make all right,
And this you will see next Hallowe'en night.

As a consolation for those who find none of the charms, a bit of the cake is kept to dream on for three nights in succession at the next full of the moon.

"Dancing in the Barns" is the fashionable fad this autumn, not the pet schottische but literally a dancing party. Nothing could be more delightful than the old fashioned husking parties, but they seem more appropriate to the rambling old barns with their hay mows, swings, etc. An elegant carriage house of to-day makes the finest ball-room imaginable. A bevy of young people come in full dress and follow their hostess from the drawing room through a covered way to the spot where music calls; the floor is covered with canvas, the walls with flags, and the best carriage has given place to a bower filled with seats and rugs, where those who wish may rest awhile; the orchestra find a cozy nook in the harness room. After tripping the "light fantastic," the party adjourned to the house for refreshments and back again to dance in the barn till midnight. As they wend their homeward way under the lighs of the harvest moon, they vote it the most delightfully unceremonious "hop" which they ever had the good fortune to attend.

Apropos of barn parties, a gentleman of some wealth in Boston wishing to dedicate his barn and give it a thorough "warming," sent out a large number of invitations, and made most elaborate preparations for entertaining his guests. The evening came and many particular friends did not appear. The cause of their dereliction does not seem strange when a number of water-soaked invitations turned up in the Charles River. The hired messenger, weary of his task after traveling through a part of the Back Bay, quietly threw the remainder into the stream, little dreaming of the dire disaster to the host and the speculations and perhaps heart-burnings this simple act would cause.

This year all tourists turned their faces toward the musical festival at Beyreuth, as last season to the Passion Play at Oberammagau. The grand opora of Wagner was the pièce de résistance for not only the musical coterie and the disciple of the great composer but for all the fashionable world. Many found it less palatable—but that is a matter of taste—than they expected. To enjoy Wagner's works one requires not only a musical education, but a thorough study of the motifs. Beyreuth is in itself a place of much simplicity, except when every two or three years people flock there from all quarters of the globe. Gowns truly Parisian vie with those of London make, and New York, Boston, and Chicago are not behind, elegant carriages are to be seen everywhere, and their gay occupants admire and exclaim over the window boxes filled with flowers in every cottage; these are always in bloom and besides there are gardens everywhere of lovely pinks and roses. The opera house is on a high hill and in the evening after the performance is over, the lighted carriages rolling over the paved streets, the drivers cracking their long whips, make a great noise and excitement. At this time the pretty windows which open in and out are crowded with peasants in quaint costumes watching the strangers and the stranger in his turn gazes admiringly at many a picturesque group after the manner Guard Dow, coloring and all.

The event of November in literary annals will be the appearance of Sir Edwin Arnold in Music Hall, Boston. A corresponding event of equal interest has not taken place since the advent of Charles Dickens. The "observed of all observers" includes not only the distinguished visitor but the entire plattorm, on which will assemble the most notable literary men of New England.

GIDEON'S FOUNTAIN.

You know the sacred legend old,
How, to the fountain's brink,
When war across the land had rolled,
Great Gideon led his armed fold
And bade them stoop and drink.

How all the cautious ones he chose
Who quaffed from palms dipped down,
And put to flight his robber foes
With slaughter fierce of battled blows
By Jezreel's lofty town.

As in the days when Gideon tried
His men to find the true,
From out the mountain's caverned side
The water wells and wanders wide,
And mirrors skies of blue.

The thirsty cattle come and stand
Deep in the cooling stream,
Wind bended reeds clasp hand with hand,
And over all the wheat sown land
Hills Galilean dream.

And as we quaff the water clear
Ere on we ride again,
We seem to see a throng appear—
The stern array with shield and spear
Of Gideon and his men.
—Clinton Scollard in Congregationalist.

THE LONE PRISONER.

Mark Twain has written an account of a campaign that failed, and how many, many accounts there have been of campaigns crowned with success. Prisoners from Dry Tortugas, from Andersonville, from a hundred other prisons have written their experiences, but I am sure the most lonesome captive of war times has "written up" no account of his captivity.

Let us go back beyond the season of secession that ushered in the ruddy season of war, to describe a certain happy homestead. It is a home already known to many southern people. At mention of Greene Springs homestead recollections of pleasant incidents of boyhood will rise up before many of the men of the old south and men of the new south as well; for old Greene Springs school has sent out many of her "boys" to do good work for their country, both in times of peace and of war. Many of the students of this "Rugby of the South" rushed eagerly to the battles, summoned by that first fateful shot from Fort Sumter. Besides being the site of one of the most noted high schools in the south, it was a home—a home, for forty years, for the members of one most happy family.

During the war four generations of this one family were ensconced in that house, and thence seven young soldiers went into the Confederate army. The married daughters of the household were now at the old homestead again, since the first fateful news that summoned the young husbands to the front—one to go as a surgeon to Fort Morgan, by the bay of Mobile; the other to raise a company on and about the hills of Hale, near Greene Springs, whence he led his men to an adventurous and most creditable career.

A widowed sister of the mother of the household had come to this wide armed house, and from there she had sent off her two boys to the ar . The oldest son of the house, just seventeen, had gone to the wars, and the adopted son of the house also donned the gray uniform of the Confederate soldier. The grandparents of the household gave up their youngest son to the cause.

Now and then, during the long and hard four years, there were furloughs for one or another of these young soldiers; then again there were stretches of time when some one or the other of the brave boys was not heard from in a long season. Then there were great grief, deep anxiety and many agonizing prayers in that house for that one who might be, for all his loved ones knew, in prison, in sickness, wounded or already numbered with the dead. Anon there was good news from each and every one of the seven soldiers; then followed days of joy and happiness; then there were their dances under the light of homemade candles, or perhaps charades for the entertainment of the soldiers who were encamped, for a few weeks, just across the creek that run near the foot of Greene Springs hill. Joy and sorrow came in quick succession with the chance and change of war; but there was one thing that no chance or change of war could interrupt, and that was work for the soldiers.

All the world knows how in that halcyon time for the south called "before the war," each home was in itself a principality, where the master ruled supreme. Every planter—and in those days planting was vocation or avocation to everybody—owned his own slaves, trained to all manner of trades, and such a life of simple and delightful luxury as these wrought out for the master the world has rarely seen. But the war between the states overturned all this.

No sooner was war abroad in the land than every home was changed from a principality to a manufactory.

Every house in the land became an establishment for weaving.

Not Penelope and all her handmaidens were busier than were the women who worked in the wake of the war. The grandmother, the mother, the young wives, the young daughters, the maids—all worked. There was a clicking of knitting needles in the house from morning till night; ladies walked hither and thither, seeing to other matters of import, yet always knitting. A reel hummed its monotonous little song in grandmother's room. Spinning wheels made dolorous monotone in one up stairs room, and in another shuttles played to and fro over the warp. One lady of the household, who had a marvelous talent for dressmaking, turned mantua maker for the family, for now no more handsome dresses could be brought from the north.

A young boy of the family put up an amateur shoe shop and made shoes for the younger children of that home. Nice little shoes he made too! Then, after the hats worn under the Union were worn out, more hats had to be made, since they could not be bought. One lady in the neighborhood of Greene Springs knew how to make pretty palmetto hats—the style of hat still made in some parts of Florida, the lightest and most delightful summer headgear ever worn. So it came to pass that the Greene Springs people and all the rest of the neighborhood were supplied with hats of that fashion. Lights, too, in those days had to be homemade. These lights were of tallow, subjected to varied processes, and then poured into molds around cotton wicks that had been grown, picked, ginned, spun, cut and twisted by the "hands" on the plantation.

Yet even with this lucent industry going on in the house there were nights when novels—for novels did sometimes run the blockades—had to be read by the blazing of pine knots in great open fireplaces. Farm work had to be carried on, and the homely supplies of meat and meal had to be increased. A sorghum mill was put up on the place for the manufacture of molasses and coarse sugar, and wheaten flour, that had heretofore been brought from the north and west, must now be grown and ground at home. Besides all this to be superintended, the school was kept up all the four years of the war, and thither came many of the sons of the south who were too young to be admitted to the ranks of the army.

All the old students of this institution who had become University of Virginia graduates, and who might have been available at other times as assistant teachers, were now off "to the front." So it came to pass that the doctor's daughters had to be pressed into service as teachers. For several hours each day the newly made spinners, weavers and seamstresses were metamorphosed into fair Hypatias, who lectured to young men on the "ologies."

Fortunately this home was spared those greatest horrors of war—the rout of soldiers sweeping over a home place and leaving desolation in its track, or the passage of marauding parties, the riff-raff of an army, to whom nothing is sacred—or the meeting of hostile hosts in sight of one's doors.

None of these horrors of a long conflict came to harrass this homestead. Indeed, the war was pretty well over when these people saw one of the invading host—I say one advisedly.

He came, this one, not with fluttering banners or braying trumpets, though he did march away to the sound of the drum. He came, not with the gay trappings and confident air of an invading power. He came a prisoner, and a very lonesome one.

His is the only real and well authenticated case of invasion of which Hale county can boast—if she cares to boast of such a misadventure.

He was a German, this invader, who became the lone captive. He could speak no English. He had, possibly, fresh from a sea voyage, donned the blue uniform at Castle Garden. I do not suppose he felt very wretched or very tragic over his capture, for in all this melee of fighting between soldiers who spoke one language, and in some instance claimed kin one with the other, probably this poor foreigner did not realize fully at what moment he crossed Mason and Dixon's line, or at what road crossing the inhabitants of the surrounding country became his enemies.

He must have fallen very much to the rear, and as his brigade swept up the river after the several encounters with the state university cadets in and about Tuskaloosa, this poor fellow mistook the route and swept down the river. And thus, all alone, he came from the hills of Tuscaloosa county to the hills of Hale county, and somewhere about the Indian mounds at Carthage (thumb marks of a race that have "moved on" long ago) our blue coated soldier "invaded" an enemy's home.

Then was there great consternation in the neighborhood of Carthage. The Home Guard hastened to arm themselves and to disarm the invader, and they kept watch for the hordes that might follow this simple forerunner.

Very little could be got out of this invader, whom lack of a gun had transformed into a prisoner of war.

But to some of the simple country women, who came from near and far to see a real "enemy," it did not seem at all strange that a "Yankee's" talk should be so unintelligible to honest folk. They thought that foreign tongue of his was a very proper tongue for a "Yankee" to have.

To the ignorant ones of the neighborhood he was an exciting wonder, with just enough suspected attributes of an alarming nature to make him the more interesting.

He was kept at Carthage but a little while ere he was passed under guard to Havana.

There the Carthage Home Guard had the pleasure of seeing their own excitement, now grown somewhat the worse for wear, reflected in all the pristine freshness by the Havana community.

The Havana Home Guard soon passed the prisoner on over three miles of up hill and down dale and causeway'ed road to Greene Springs, the home and school on the hill.

There at the front yard gate he stood, a small guard about him, waiting to see what disposal the doctor would make of the prisoner.

The enemy at our door!

Oh, what excitement in all the female elements of that home!

Shall he be brought in? Under our very roof tree?

No!

War has nearly spent itself; shall he be turned free?

Never!

Shall he be warmed and fed?

What! strengthen the enemy! When even now brothers, cousins, uncles, brothers-in-law, husbands, sons of the household are fronting the guns of this same enemy in blue?

Amid all this stir of feminine interrogation and invective the father entered, summoned in haste from his classes. Amid general hubbub he was told of the captive and captors at the gate.

Before all else, the father thinks of the man's bodily needs. "Let us," said he, "bring him in and give him something to eat; for if he has been brought from Carthage here on foot he must be both tired and hungry."

Whereupon the storm of dissent and of patriotic utterance began to swell afresh.

"Well, well, well," said the father, "we must heap coals of fire on our enemy's head, you know."

"Heap coals of fire on his head!" thought the youngest and most belligerant boy of the family.

Awestruck this most warlike little fellow of five followed his father down the broad flight of front steps, among the yard beds and down the wide walk to where the prisoner waited at the little gate. Just before the gate was reached the boy could no longer curb his curiosity, his desire to know all the dreadful, but exciting truth, so he reached up and pulled his father's coat to attract his attention: "Father! father!" he whispered, "are you going to put the coals on now? Are you going to put the fire on his head right now?"

Great, doubtless, must have been the relief experienced by the boy when he found that the translation of this Biblical phrase into fact permitted the bringing in of the prisoner to a warm and comfortable room, and that there he was allowed to sit before a bright fire, to reach the soles of his feet to the blazes thereof, instead of having the coals of the same applied to his head.

I cannot but fancy that the poor German felt somewhat pleased with his glimpse of home life in Dixie. Certainly it was a pretty little dining room into which he was carried, with its bright flood of sunlight, its glint of firelight, gleam of silver on the highly polished tables, its dusky, shining faced waiting boy—who, by the way, was fearfully afraid to wait on the Yankee as he ate—and, better than all else, the poor German, pining for a word in his own tongue, was the talk in his own language that he had with the doctor and his daughter.

When the prisoner was fed and warmed the question arose as to how he was to be "moved on" to the next hamlet.

Every school in the land was at that time something of a military establishment, so the company of Greene Springs' schoolboys was marched out to be guard to the prisoner a little farther on his way. The roll of the drum and the shrill note of the fife were heard on the Hill of Science. The beardless soldier boys took the lone prisoner in charge, and to the stirring tones of "The Bonnie Blue Flag" the little army marched down the red hill, through Five Mile Creek swamp and over to Harristown.

There the captive was turned over to the Home Guard of that hamlet, and the boys marched back to their lecture rooms.

The doctor and the Greene Springs home people knew that the prisoner was well on his way toward Greensborough, when they heard the boys with their fresh clear young voices strike into cheery song, as their march homeward brought them to the foot of the red old hill that carried as its crown one of the sweetest homes the world has ever held. The song that the boys sang was one that stirred their young hearts up to a desire for real marching to real battle:

Oh, here I am in the land of cotton,
The flag once honored is now forgotten;
Fight away, fight away, fight away for
Dixie's land.

But here I stand for Dixie dear
To fight for freedom without fear;
Fight away, fight away, fight away for
Dixie's land.

For Dixie's land I'll take my stand,
To live and die for Dixie's land,
Fight away, fight away, fight away for
Dixie's land.

The stars and bars are waving oe'r us,
And independence is before us;
Fight away, fight away, fight away for
Dixie's land.

Soon enough these boys, and all other boys able to carry guns, were ordered to the front along with the old men. It was not long after this that the doctor and his second son, a lad of fourteen years, were on their way to make part of the hastily summoned reenforcement of the shattered Confederate forces. But ere these last called troops could with all haste reach the thunder sound of cannon and the heavy rain of bullets the news came that the great General Robert E. Lee had surrendered, and the war was over.—Martha Young in New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Democratic rally at Odd Fellows' Hall, Tuesday evening, was a questionable success, even to the minds of the Democrats, The attendance was very small, and the enthusiasm in keeping with the attendance. Peter Holt, Jr., presided, and introduced Hon. Henry W. Lamb, Hon. Dan. Crowley, and Charles DeCourcey as the orators, who sought to make a creditable showing for themselves and their party.

The speeches at the Republican rally will be vastly more interesting to the public, because they will not take up so much time, and will be very concise. In fact, it is the decision of the Town Committee not to allow the Republican speakers to take up any time at all this year, therefore the report of this "rally" can be more satisfactorily given, and will not injure anybody's political feelings.

Assistant Secretary—George H. Moulton.

Lodge Deputy Kelley of Haverhill will install the officers Monday evening.

The late Timothy A. Smith of Westboro', a baker, amassed a fortune of about $37,000. By will, one-half of the property undevised is bequeathed to the executors in trust for his daughter, Mrs. Ianthe M. Child, the other half to the remaining legatees. The sum of $3000 was left to his second wife in leiu of a dower, and a like amount was placed in trust for his adopted son, Norman Smith.

This clause appears in the will: "I give to Mrs. Eliza Leonard, my sister, a home at my house as long as she lives." The same providing, also, a home for Clara W. Leonard at his house as long as her mother lives.

The will has been in litigation, and Judge Knowlton is called upon to determine the meaning of the word "home." Mrs. Child claims that it means only shelter. The beneficiaries claim it to mean shelter and support. The judge has decided that in regard to the undisposed property that as residuary legatees, Mrs. Child is entitled to one-half, and the remaining half belongs to Mrs. and Miss Leonard and Norman Smith. On the definition of the word "home" the Court has not yet rendered his decision.

The Mrs. Eliza Leonard referred to in the will is the mother of Mr. Frank S. Leonard of this town, and an octogenarian.

Several of the Unitarian people attended the installation of Rev. Mr. Young, at Lawrence, Tuesday evening.

The electric system had a tie-up lasting about two hours and a half Tuesday evening. The various open-air stations along the route were surrounded with shivering human beings, who watched and waited in vain. The people from Lawrence working in town were obliged to walk home, and were, as many others, pretty thoroughly disgusted with the situation. For reliable service or accommodation it is an evident fact that the present system does not begin to compare with the horse-cars.

Wedding.

Mr. Lewis McInnis and Miss Olive E., the eldest daughter of Mr. Edward and Mrs. Sarah C. Cooper, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents on Main Street, Wednesday afternoon, at 3.30 o'clock.

The ceremony was strictly private and was performed by Rev. A. H. Amory of Grace Church, Lawrence, only the immediate family relatives and one or two close friends being in attendance. Subsequently an informal reception was held and a wedding dinner served. Mr. and Mrs. McInnis left the South Depot, Lawrence, on the 7 o'clock evening train, and after a brief sojourn will reside temporarily with the bride's parents. The couple were very kindly remembered and received many valuable gifts.

The Town refuses to Recognize or Act under an Illegal Warrant.

Pursuant to notices posted in various parts of the town quite an assembly of citizens gathered at Stevens Hall, Saturday evening. At 7 o'clock the meeting was called to order by the Town Clerk, Isaac F. Osgood, and the notice read by Selectman George L. Weil. The chairman then stated that the next business was to organize by the election of Moderator. In the light of previous circumstances it devolved upon one of the skeptical members of the gathering to rise and respectfully question the legality of the instrument which purported to be a Town Warrant.

The reasons given were that the law required in calling a town meeting that the warrant should be drawn up or given under the hands of the selectmen. The instrument presented to the assembly was constructed, caused to be printed and posted by a selectman who affixed the signatures of the other two selectmen to the document without their knowledge and without their authority or consent. Copies had been posted four or five days when a meeting of the selectmen occurred for the stated purpose, i.e. (so stated to him) of making a new warrant about which there could be no question of legality. For some reason that new warrant never made its appearance, the Board at its meeting preferring rather to attempt to ratify or sanction the unauthorized and illegal act of the chairman. It was submitted as to whether it was unreasonable to state that at least from the time that the warrant was posted, until the time it was ratified, if perchance such ratification was allowable, if during that time it was not clearly illegal. It was claimed that a proposition must be consented to before it could be ratified, and this notification had already been in service about five days before it was even consented to, and if legal notification to the town dated from the time of "ratification" by the selectmen then two Sundays had not and therefore fourteen days could not have elapsed since proper legal notice. It was further stated that the selectmen evidently proposed at their meeting of Oct. 15th to draw up a warrant concerning which their could be no question, but for some reason had concluded to present a questionable instrument instead.

For the reasons cited and for reasons which could be given if necessary, the town was asked to refuse to act until they could have a proper warrant and one concerning which there could be do question. In accordance with the reasons a motion that the meeting be adjourned was submitted.

Hon. Willard P. Phillips thought that the matter could be very easily unraveled and asked the chairman the date that the warrant was given under the hands of the selectmen. The reply was Oct. 10. He then asked the selectmen when it received their ratification, and was told after a little time Oct. 15. He called for the record of the meeting, but the clerk of the Board was not present at the time. Mr. Andrew McLean then seconded the motion to adjourn.

Selectman Weil substantiated the allegations previously made and said that neither he or Mr. Greene had signed the warrant, but they concluded to let it go and if the town wanted to refuse to act under it, well and good, if they wanted to go through with the warrant and strike out the articles well and good. About the "ratification" he admitted there was a serious question. He differed only with the first speaker on the point of what the meeting of the selectmen was held for Oct. 15.

Just how the meeting could proceed to strike out articles from something they evidently did not have, was a point that was not clearly explained.

The motion before the house to adjourn was defeated. The decision being respectfully doubted, the motion was resubmitted and failed. Mr. McLean then called upon the Town Clerk to pass upon the legality of the warrant, and Mr. Osgood without hesitancy said he should pronounce it illegal.

On the motion of Mr. Glennie, it was voted to proceed to the election of Moderator and the voters were requested to bring in their ballots for that officer. No one volunteered, and after a lapse of several minutes the chairman said: "Come gentlemen where are your votes for Moderator?" Then a great silence fell upon the multitude and from out of the silence came a voice, and the voice, that of Mr. John Rea, said: "Mr. Chairman, I move you that we adjourn," and a second voice came out of the silence, the voice of Hon. W. P. Phillips, saying, "I second the motion." The motion was submitted and the voices of the multitude were in accord. This was the end of the beginning.

Several citizens expected a rather protracted meeting and were on the way to Stevens Hall when the met the "town meeting" on its way home. The action of the town is looked upon as a censure for the lax method of conducting affairs and should serve also as a warning to all town officials.
